CATALOGING NEVADA INDIANS

One of the most complete Indian catalogues ever prepared is now at most completed by Major G. W. Ingalls, former special Indian commissioner for the United States government, who is assisting Congressman E. E. Roberts in his efforts before congress to provide for the Washoe Indians of Nevada by gathering data on the tribe, says the Reno Gazette.
While it has been heretofore roughly estimated that there are 30 Washoes in the state, the new census of the tribe will show a total of close to 600 members of the Washoe branch of redskins, and not only will it show the number of Indians, but it will give nearly every man, woman and child by name, and the general location of his, her or its residence.

For weeks past leading members of the Washoe tribe have been working for Major Ingalls, coming in to Reno periodically to submit to him lists of the Indians of the tribe not already noted down. There has been an Indian working in Long Valley and Honey Lake Valley others near Washoe and others toward Carson.
Congressman Roberts is planning to interest the government in carrying for the Washoe as well as for the Paiutes. The list in the early days were unlike but the Washoe never joined them in their wars or sal-laries and are considered to have done more for the white man than their more fortunate neighbors. Of the two tribes of Indians the Washoe is considered by many to be the most thrifty, and in recognition of past services to the whites it is now desired to help the tribe as a whole and Major Ingalls is gathering accurate data for Congressman Roberts' use in his effort.

The information thus gathered is to be used in another way by Major Ingalls in connection with the report he and Major Powell made in '73 on the Indians of Nevada. At that time it was generally supposed that in Nevada, Arizona, southeastern California and southern Idaho there were 30,000 Indians. Their census shows but 11,000.

In the new history of Nevada now being prepared Major Ingalls has been assigned 150 pages for a history of the Nevada redskins.

In his library including many rare records and volumes he has what is probably the only complete file of government Indian reports in existence.

Christmas Dinner

Save the trouble of preparing it at home and go to the Bon Ton Cafe.
Plenty of turkey and cranberry sauce and mince pie—just like mother makes. Families wanting tables reserved should notify the management of the cafe in advance. Adv.

A. D. Knowlton, the Salt Lake mil-ing engineer, who has been surveying the Rustie group of claims for patent, has completed his labor and returned home Wednesday.

With the insignificant little suit of a 2500 shareholder of an issued stock of 1,500,000 shares out of the way, the expectation is that immediately operations on a large scale will be inaugurated at the various properties of the Nevada Utah. On Sunday Mr.
Palmer, manager of Tripp & Co., leading New York brokers, who have taken up the herculean task of reorganizing the company, was in Salt Lake in consultation here with Frank A. Dillingham, general counsel for the Nevada Utah company.
The meeting here followed Mr. Palmer's visit to the mine at Pioche in company with Ernest Godbe and one of the consulting engineers of the company.

The referred to litigation seeks to invalidate the sale of property to the reorganizing company. The lower court has approved the transaction and the general opinion is that it will stand; in fact, that the matter will be settled within the next few days, action having been postponed a number of times. The plans of the reorganization are to issue bonds to shareholders, each to get share for share on payment of 50 cents, receiving bonds guaranteed by the company's property as protection
